Assumptions Used in Arriving at Fiscal Estimate

No fiscal effect is expected from the proposed amendments beyond that anticipated in 2009 Wisconsin Act 11 regarding the exception to disqualification for quitting a specific job in order to care for an ill or disabled family member, provided that the claimant remains available for other full time work. Field office staff estimated that approximately 100 claimants in any given year would be allowed benefits as a result of the less stringent requirements in Act 11. Based on benefits received by a sample of those excepted from disqualification prior to passage of Act 11, it was further estimated that total Unemployment Insurance benefit expenditures would increase by approximately $100,000 as a result of the less stringent requirements. Of the $100,000, it is estimated that $1,000 in increased expenditures will be experienced by state government, $2,000 by local units of government, and $97,000 by private employers. No fiscal effects are expected from the other proposed amendments to the rule as these are clarifying or corrective of the intent of the rule as originally passed and analyzed.
