Felony Sentencing and Probation

Introduction

In Wisconsin, a felony is defined as any criminal offense that is punishable by imprisonment in state prison. All other criminal offenses are classified as misdemeanors. Any person age 17 years and older who commits a felony or misdemeanor is considered an adult and may be sentenced to confinement or placed on probation, and/or fined. Under some circumstances, persons under the age of 17 may be charged and sentenced as an adult. Offenders sentenced to more than one year of incarceration are imprisoned in state correctional facilities, and all sentences to state correctional facilities must be for at least one year. Those offenders sentenced to less than one year, whether for a felony or misdemeanor, are confined in county jails. A sentence of one year for a crime occurring before December 31, 1999, may be to either a state correctional facility or a county jail unless the statutes provide for a specific placement. Offenders sentenced to one year incarceration for a crime occurring on or after December 31, 1999, are imprisoned in state correctional facilities.

For all felony offenses committed on or after December 31, 1999, except for those punishable by life imprisonment, felons sentenced to prison are given a bifurcated (two-part) sentence, under which a sentencing judge specifies an amount of time a convicted felon will serve in prison and an amount of time a felon will serve in the community on extended supervision. Under a bifurcated sentence, judges may also require that the felon be placed in the intensive sanctions program as a part of extended supervision. The bifurcated (determinate) sentencing structure is commonly known as "truth-in-sentencing." Judges may also fine an offender in addition to, or instead of, imposing a bifurcated sentence or jail term, or may place a felon on probation. In addition, certain serious sex offenders may be placed on lifetime supervision after the expiration of their sentence or upon completion of probation. Felons sentenced to life imprisonment do not receive a bifurcated sentence, but rather may petition the court for release to extended supervision under specific circumstances.

For felony offenses committed before December 31, 1999, convicted felons may be: (a) sentenced to an indeterminate term of imprisonment; (b) sentenced to the intensive sanctions program; or (c) placed on state-supervised probation. As under a bifurcated sentence, a convicted felon may also be fined in addition to, or instead of, any other punishment. This sentencing structure is referred to as "indeterminate" because felons may be paroled from prison and discharged from supervision prior to serving the maximum sentence imposed by the court.

Once a court sentences a felony offender to confinement in state prison under a bifurcated or indeterminate sentence, the offender is transferred to the custody of the Department of Corrections (Corrections). After a period of assessment and evaluation at the Dodge Correctional Institution in Waupun (for male inmates) or at the Taycheedah Correctional Institution in Fond du Lac (for female inmates), Corrections determines which correctional facility is appropriate for a sentenced offender.

In sentencing offenders for misdemeanor offenses, judges may imprison an offender in a county jail or place a person on probation. Maximum misdemeanor imprisonment ranges from not more than 30 days for a Class C misdemeanor to not more than nine months for a Class A misdemeanor (an exception would be if a penalty enhancement is applied, increasing an offender's term of imprisonment). Offenders in jail for sentences of more than four days are eligible to earn good time credit of up to 25% of the court-imposed sentence. The county has custody of misdemeanants sentenced to county jail. Corrections supervises misdemeanants placed on probation by the court.

This paper addresses the various sentencing options by which an offender may be placed under state supervision in the adult programs of the Department of Corrections. The paper is divided into the following sections: (a) Truth-in-Sentencing I (bifurcated sentences for felonies committed on or December 1, 1999 and before February 1, 2003); (b) Truth-in-Sentencing II (modifications to the original Truth-in-Sentencing legislation, applicable to felonies committed on or after February 1, 2003); (c) 2009 Act 28 Sentencing Modifications, and the 2011 Act 38 Repeal of the Sentencing Modifications; (d) Court-Sentenced Correctional Programs; (e) Serious Repeat Offenders and Mandatory Minimum Sentences; (f) Probation; (g) Lifetime Supervision of Serious Sex Offenders; (h) Original Court Jurisdiction Over Certain Juveniles; (i) Waiver of Certain Juveniles to Adult Court; and (j) Placement of Juveniles Sentenced to Prison.

In this paper the following terms are used:

1. "Incarceration" or "Confinement." Placement of an offender in a state correctional facility or county jail.
2. "Parole." Release of an offender sentenced under an indeterminate sentence to the community under the supervision of the Department of Corrections. Corrections may discharge a person from parole prior to the person serving the maximum sentence imposed by the court.
3. "Mandatory Release." Release from prison to parole supervision after serving two-thirds of an indeterminate sentence established by the court for offenses occurring before December 31, 1999.

4. "Extended Supervision." Release of an offender as part of a bifurcated sentence or release of an offender sentenced to life imprisonment to the community under the supervision of Corrections.

5. "Intensive Sanctions." A sentence imposed by a judge for a felony offense that includes a term of confinement in prison and highly structured community supervision, followed by parole. Prior to parole, an offender under an intensive sanctions sentence is considered an inmate and may be returned to prison without a revocation hearing. Judges may only sentence individuals to intensive sanctions for offenses that occur between August 15, 1991, and December 30, 1999. For offenses occurring on or after December 31, 1999, an offender may not be sentenced to the intensive sanctions program and may not participate in the program during the confinement portion of a bifurcated sentence, but may be placed in the program as a condition of extended supervision.

6. "Probation." Placement of an offender under the supervision of Corrections in the community without confinement in state prison, although confinement in a county jail may be required. An offender placed on probation is subject to conditions imposed by the court and/or Corrections.

Truth-in-Sentencing I – Bifurcated Sentences for Offenses Committed on or after December
1, 1999, and before February 1, 2003

Under 1997 Act 283, a bifurcated (determinate) sentencing structure was created for all felony offenses. Under this structure, courts are required to impose a bifurcated (two-part) sentence for any felony occurring on or after December 31, 1999, except for felonies resulting in a life sentence. Prior to Act 283, offenders were sentenced under an indeterminate sentencing structure. Appendix I provides a description of indeterminate sentencing for felony offenses occurring before December 31, 1999.

A bifurcated sentence consists of a term of confinement in prison followed by a term of extended supervision in the community. The term of confinement in prison cannot be less than one year, subject to any minimum sentence prescribed for the felony and any penalty enhancement. If the maximum term of confinement in prison is increased by a penalty enhancement, the total length of the bifurcated sentence (confinement plus extended supervision) that can be imposed is increased by the same amount.

When sentencing a felon, judges may specify that sentences run concurrently or consecutively. Judges may not, however, order imprisonment followed by probation as the sentence for a single crime. The length of sentence may be increased for certain offenders by penalty enhancers for activities such as habitual criminality, use of a dangerous weapon, or repeated serious sex crimes.

Persons serving a bifurcated sentence are not eligible for the intensive sanctions or community residential confinement programs during the prison portion of the bifurcated sentence. Further, sentenced offenders are only eligible for the challenge incarceration program ("boot camp") or the Wisconsin substance abuse program ("earned release") if the sentencing court specifies that they are eligible. If an eligible person successfully completes one of these programs, the judge is required to reduce the prison portion of the sentence so the person is released to supervision, while the supervision portion of the sentence is increased by a corresponding amount, resulting in the same total sentence length.

Felony offenses, committed prior to February 1, 2003, are identified as either classified felonies (Appendix II) or unclassified felonies (Appendix III). For unclassified felonies, Appendix II provides a comparison of the penalties under bifurcated sentencing (between December 31, 1999, and February 1, 2003) and the penalties under indeterminate sentencing. All felony offenses occurring on or after February 1, 2003, (with the exception of three offenses) were placed under a classification system by 2001 Act 109, and are identified in Appendix IV.

The maximum sentence (confinement time plus extended supervision) for classified felonies occurring on or after December 31, 1999 and before February 1, 2003, is: (a) life for Class A felonies; (b) 60 years for Class B felonies; (c) 30 years for Class BC felonies; (d) 15 years for Class C felonies; (e) 10 years for Class D felonies; and (f) five years for Class E felonies. The maximum term of confinement for these is: (a) life for Class A felonies; (b) 40 years for Class B felonies; (c) 20 years for Class BC felonies; (d) 10 years for Class C felonies; (e) five years for Class D felonies; and (f) two years for Class E felonies. For any felony other than a felony listed above, the term of confinement in prison cannot exceed 75% of the total length of the bifurcated sentence.

Modifications to the bifurcated sentence structure were enacted under 2001 Act 109, effective February 1, 2003, and are discussed in the following section.

The extended supervision portion of the bifurcated sentence may not be less than 25% of the length of the term of confinement in prison. The court may impose conditions on the term of extended supervision. A person serving a bifurcated sentence is not eligible for parole or mandatory release, nor eligible for sentence reduction for good behavior. Corrections is prohibited from discharging a person serving a bifurcated sentence from custody, control and supervision until the person has served the entire bifurcated sentence, including any periods of extension in prison imposed by Corrections for disciplinary reasons. The court is required to inform a person being sentenced of Corrections' ability to extend a sentence for disciplinary reasons as described below.

An inmate imprisoned under a bifurcated sentence is not eligible for release to extended supervision until the court-specified term of confinement is completed. A warden or superintendent of a correctional facility is required to keep a record of the conduct of each inmate, specifying each infraction of the rules. If an inmate violates any regulation of the prison or refuses or neglects to perform required or assigned duties, Corrections may extend the term of confinement as follows:

1. 10 days for the 1st offense.
2. 20 days for the 2nd offense.
3. 40 days for the 3rd or each subsequent offense.

In addition to the above sanctions, if an inmate is placed in adjustment, program, or controlled segregation status, Corrections may extend his or her term of confinement by a number of days equal to 50% of the number of days spent in segregation status. Corrections is required to use the definition of adjustment, program, or controlled segregation status under administrative rules in effect at the time an inmate is placed in that status. No extension of a term of confinement may require an inmate to serve more days in prison than the total length of the bifurcated sentence. If the term of confinement in prison is increased, the term of extended supervision is reduced so that the total length of the bifurcated sentence is not changed.

All consecutive bifurcated sentences are computed as one continuous sentence. A person serves any term of extended supervision only after serving all terms of confinement in prison. An inmate is allowed to waive entitlement to release to extended supervision if Corrections agrees to the waiver.

Before a person is released to extended supervision, Corrections is required to notify the municipal police department and the county sheriff for the area where the person will be residing. Inmates released to extended supervision are subject to all conditions and rules of extended supervision until the expiration of the extended supervision portion of the bifurcated sentence. Corrections may establish conditions of extended supervision, in addition to any conditions set by the court at sentencing, if the conditions set by Corrections do not conflict with the court's conditions.

If a person released to extended supervision violates a condition of that placement, the Division of Hearings and Appeals in the Department of Administration or Corrections (if the person on extended supervision waives a hearing) may revoke the extended supervision of the person. If the person is returned to prison, he or she may be returned for any specified period of time that does not exceed the time remaining on the bifurcated sentence. The term "time remaining" is defined as the total length of the bifurcated sentence, less time served in custody before release to extended supervision by the person. The period of reincarceration time may be extended for disciplinary reasons.

A person sentenced to life imprisonment for crimes that occur on or after December 31, 1999, is not given a bifurcated sentence and is not eligible for release on parole. Instead, the court determines one of the following eligibility dates for extended supervision:

1. After serving 20 years.
2. On a date set by the court that is later than 20 years.
3. The person is not eligible for release to extended supervision.

When sentencing a person to life imprisonment, the court is required to inform the person of Corrections' ability to delay eligibility for extended supervision for release for disciplinary reasons. The court must also inform the person sentenced to life imprisonment of the procedure for petitioning for release to extended supervision.

A person sentenced to life imprisonment for crimes occurring on or after December 31, 1999, is generally subject to the same sentencing provisions as other offenders except that the following specific provisions also apply:

1. No individual sentenced to life without the possibility of extended supervision may be placed on extended supervision.

2. An inmate serving a life sentence with the possibility of extended supervision may not petition the sentencing court for release to extended supervision until after either: (a) he or she has served 20 years, if the inmate is given a sentence allowing that possibility; or (b) he or she reaches the extended supervision eligibility date set by the court.

3. Violations of prison rules and regulations may result in the extension of the date of eligibility for extended supervision.

4. An inmate serving a life sentence who seeks release to extended supervision is required to file a petition for release with the court that sentenced him or her. An inmate may not file an initial petition earlier than 90 days before his or her extended supervision eligibility date. If an inmate files an initial petition for release to extended supervision at any time earlier than 90 days, the court will deny the petition without a hearing. An inmate filing for release must also serve a copy of a petition for release on the district attorney's office that prosecuted him or her, and the district attorney must give a written response to the petition within 45 days after he or she receives the petition.

After reviewing a petition for release and the district attorney's response, the court will decide whether to hold a hearing on the petition or whether to grant or deny the petition without a hearing. If the court decides to hold a hearing, the hearing must be without a jury.

5. Before deciding whether to grant or deny the inmate's petition, the court is required to allow a victim or family member of a homicide victim to make a statement or submit a statement concerning the release of the inmate to extended supervision. The court may also allow any other person to make or submit a statement. Any statement, however, must be relevant to the release of the inmate to extended supervision.

In order to be released to extended supervision, an inmate is required to prove to the court, by clear and convincing evidence, that he or she is not a danger to the public. If the court grants the inmate's petition for release, the court may impose conditions on the term of extended supervision. If the court denies the inmate's petition, the court is required to specify the date on which the inmate may file a subsequent petition. An inmate may file a subsequent petition at any time on or after the date specified by the court, but if the inmate files a subsequent petition for release to extended supervision before the date specified by the court, the court may deny the petition without a hearing.

An inmate may also appeal an order denying his or her petition, but the appellate court is required to determine only whether the court properly exercised its discretion in denying the petition.

6. A person serving a life sentence who is returned to prison after revocation of extended supervision is required to be incarcerated for at least five years, after which period of time the person may, upon petition to the sentencing court, be released to extended supervision. An inmate may not file a petition earlier than 90 days before the end of the reincarceration period, which includes any extensions for prison rules violations.

7. If a person serving a life sentence files a petition for release or rerelease, the clerk of the circuit court in which the petition is filed is required to send a copy of the petition and, if a hearing is scheduled, a notice of hearing to victims who request notification. If the victim died as a result of the crime, an adult member of the victim's family is notified. The Director of State Courts is required to design and prepare victim address cards to send to the clerks of the circuit courts, without charge. The clerks of the circuit courts are then required to provide the cards, without charge, to victims.

Truth-in-Sentencing II – Modifications to Bifurcated Sentencing on or after February 1, 2003

In addition to creating the bifurcated sentencing structure, 1997 Act 283 created an 18-member Criminal Penalties Study Committee to study and prepare a report on: (a) the classification of criminal offenses in the criminal code (Chapters 939 to 951 of the Statutes); (b) the penalties for all felonies and Class A misdemeanors; and (c) other issues related to the implementation of the changes in sentencing made in the Act. The Committee submitted its final report on August 31, 1999, with recommendations for modifying the bifurcated sentencing structure. Most of the Committee's recommendations were enacted under 2001 Act 109 and became effective February 1, 2003. The most significant changes included: (a) modifying the classes of felonies and providing statutory caps on the extended supervision portion of the bifurcated sentence; (b) modifying maximum fines; (c) creating sentencing guidelines; (d) specifying the order in which penalty enhancers are applied; (e) providing mechanisms for offenders to petition to the sentencing court to modify their sentence; (f) modifying the terms of extended supervision; (g) providing a new sanction for violation of extended supervision conditions; and (h) providing that the sentencing court determines the length of time an offender will be returned to prison for revocation of extended supervision. These changes are described below.

It should be noted that the 2009-11 biennial budget act, 2009 Act 28, included sentencing modifications that impacted these provisions, effective October 1, 2009. The Act 28 provisions are described in a subsequent section of this paper.

Felony Classification. Under the modified bifurcated sentence structure, the previous six classes of felonies were expanded to nine (Class A through Class I). Generally, classified crimes were reclassified as follows: (a) Class A felonies became Class A or B felonies; (b) Class B felonies became Class C felonies; (c) Class BC felonies became Class C or D felonies; (d) Class C felonies became Class F felonies; (e) Class D felonies became Class H felonies; and (f) Class E felonies became Class I felonies.

Table 1 compares the maximum bifurcated sentences (confinement in prison plus extended supervision) for indeterminate sentencing (discussed in Appendix I) for crimes occurring before December 31, 1999, the bifurcated sentences for crimes under the prior felony classifications (Truth-in-Sentencing I), and for the current nine felony classes under Truth-in-Sentencing II. Table 2 shows the maximum term of imprisonment under the revised felony classes (excluding time that may be imposed for misconduct in prison or return after revocation), and also shows the mandatory release times under indeterminate sentencing for crimes committed prior to December 31, 1999.

Appendix IV identifies all felony offenses as classified beginning February 1, 2003.

Table 3 summarizes the maximum confinement and extended supervision for the modified bifurcated sentencing structure.

Maximum Fines. For crimes occurring prior to February 1, 2003, the maximum fine for classified felonies is $10,000. For unclassified felonies, the range of fines varies by offense from $25 to $1,000,000. Beginning February 1, 2003, the maximum fines that may be imposed by the sentencing court also increased: (a) Classes C and D, $100,000; (b) Class E, $50,000; (c) Classes F and G, $25,000; and (d) Classes H and I, $10,000.

Sentencing Guidelines, and Consideration of Aggravating and Mitigating Factors. During sentencing, the court must decide whether to impose a bifurcated sentence or place the person on probation, the length of sentence or probation, and the amount of a fine, if any. When making a sentencing decision for an offense committed on or after February 1, 2003, a court is required to consider all of the following:

1. Protection of the public.
2. The gravity of the offense.
3. The rehabilitative needs of the defendant.
4. Any applicable mitigating factors and any applicable aggravating factors.

In a sentencing decision, a court is required to consider all of the following as aggravating factors, if applicable (unlike aggravating factors, mitigating factors are not specified by statute):

1. The person committed the crime while his or her usual appearance was concealed, disguised, or altered, with the intent to make it less likely that he or she would be identified with the crime.
2. The person committed the crime using information that was disclosed to him or her from the state's sex offender registry.
3. The person committed the crime for the benefit of, at the direction of, or in association with any criminal gang, with the specific intent to promote, further, or assist in any criminal conduct by criminal gang members.
4. The person committed the felony while wearing a vest or other garment designed, redesigned, or adapted to prevent bullets from penetrating the garment.
5. The person committed the felony with the intent to influence the policy of a governmental unit or to punish a governmental unit for a prior policy decision, if any of the following circumstances also applies to the offense: (a) the person caused bodily harm, great bodily harm, or death to another; (b) the person caused damage to the property of another and the total property damaged is reduced in value by $25,000 or more; or (c) the person used force or violence or the threat of force or violence. The provision would not apply to conduct arising out of or in connection with a labor dispute.

In addition to the general aggravating circumstances courts are required to consider at sentencing, courts are required to consider the following special aggravating circumstances for serious sex crimes, crimes against the elderly, child sexual assault, domestic abuse in the presence of a child, homicide or injury by intoxicated use of motor vehicle, and controlled substances:

- Serious Sex Crimes. Courts are required to consider as an aggravating factor the fact that, at the time that the person committed the serious sex crime, the crime was committed under all of the following circumstances:

1. The person had a sexually transmitted disease or acquired immunodeficiency syndrome or had tested positive for the presence of human immunodeficiency virus (HIV).
2. The person knew that he or she had a sexually transmitted disease or acquired immunodeficiency syndrome or that he or she had tested positive for the presence of HIV.
3. The victim of the serious sex crime was significantly exposed to HIV or to the sexually transmitted disease, by the acts constituting the serious sex crime.

- Violent Felonies Committed Against an Elderly Person (62 years of age or older). Courts are required to consider as an aggravating factor the fact that the victim of the violent felony was an elderly person, even if the offender mistakenly believed that the victim had not attained the age of 62 years.

- Child Sexual Assault or Child Abuse.

Courts are required to consider as an aggravating factor if the person was responsible for the welfare of the child who was the victim of the violation, including the child's parent, stepparent, guardian, foster parent; an employee of a public or private residential home, institution, or agency; any other person legally responsible for the child's welfare in a residential setting; or a person employed by one who is legally responsible for the child's welfare to exercise temporary control or care for the child.

- Domestic Abuse in Presence of Child.

Courts are required to consider as an aggravating factor if the person committed an act of domestic abuse observable to a child and the person knew or had reason to know the act was observable to the child.

- Homicide or Injury by Intoxicated Use of a Vehicle. Courts are required to consider as an aggravating factor the fact that, at the time of the violation, there was a minor passenger under 16 years of age or an unborn child in the person's motor vehicle.

- Controlled Substances - Distribution or Delivery to Prisoners. Courts are required to consider as an aggravating factor the fact that the violation involved delivering, distributing, or possessing with intent to deliver or distribute a controlled substance, controlled substance analog, or methamphetamine to a prisoner within the precincts of any prison, jail, or house of correction.

- Controlled Substances - Distribution or Delivery on Public Transit Vehicles. Courts are required to consider as an aggravating factor the fact that the violation involved delivering, distributing, or possessing with intent to deliver or distribute a controlled substance, controlled substance analog, or methamphetamine, and that the person knowingly used a public transit vehicle during the violation.

Under the statutes, the aggravating factors are not elements of a crime. A prosecutor is not required to charge any aggravating factor or otherwise allege the existence of an aggravating factor in any pleading for a court to consider the aggravating factor when making a sentencing decision.

In making a sentencing decision, a court is required to state the reasons for its sentencing decision, and do so in open court and on the record. However, if a court determines that it is not in the interest of the defendant for it to state the reasons for its sentencing decision in the defendant's presence, the court must state the reasons for its sentencing decision in writing and include the written statement in the record.

Application Order of Penalty Enhancers. For offenses committed on or after February 1, 2003, if more than one of the following penalty enhancement statutes apply to a crime, a court is required to apply them in the order listed in calculating the maximum term of imprisonment for the crime:

1. Domestic abuse, violence in a school zone, certain crimes against children committed by a child care provider, crimes committed against certain people or property, escape if the person who had custody of the escapee is injured, distribution or delivery of a controlled substance to a person under 18 years of age, and distribution of a controlled substance in or near certain places.

2. Use of a dangerous weapon.

3. Habitual criminality or second or subsequent controlled substances offenses.

Modification of Bifurcated Sentence. Under the modified bifurcated sentence structure, beginning February 1, 2003, there were two means by which a bifurcated sentence may be modified. [It should be noted that 2009 Act 28 included statutory language changes to this provision, which are discussed in a later section of this paper.] Under the first method, an inmate, serving a sentence for a crime other than a Class B felony, may seek modification of the sentence if he or she meets one of the following criteria:

1. The inmate is 65 years of age or older and has served at least five years of the term of confinement for the prison portion of the bifurcated sentence;
2. The inmate is 60 years of age or older and has served at least 10 years of the term of confinement for the prison portion of the bifurcated sentence; or
3. The inmate has an extraordinary health condition. [Prior to 2009 Act 28, the requirement was that the inmate have a terminal condition.] An "extraordinary health condition" is defined as a condition afflicting a person, such as advanced age, infirmity, or disability of the person or a need for medical treatment or services not available within a correctional institution.

An inmate who meets one of the above criteria may petition the program review committee of the correctional institution requesting modification of a bifurcated sentence. The program review committee may deny the petition or may refer it to the sentencing court if the committee determines that public interest would be served by modification of the sentence. If the petition is referred, the sentencing court is required to conduct a hearing, where the inmate has the burden of proving by the greater weight of the credible evidence that modification would serve public interest. If the inmate meets the burden of proof, the court is required to modify the inmate's sentence by releasing the inmate to extended supervision within 30 days after the date the court issues its order. The term of extended supervision is lengthened so that the total length of the bifurcated sentence originally imposed does not change. The state may appeal the court's decision to grant an inmate's petition to the appellate court. If the inmate's petition is denied, the inmate may appeal the decision. The appellate court may reverse the decision only if it determines that the sentencing court erroneously exercised its discretion in granting or denying the petition.

Any petition that is denied by the program review committee or court may not be refiled within one year. Inmates eligible to seek modification have the right to be represented by counsel, including representation by the State Public Defender.

The second manner in which a bifurcated sentence may be modified provides that an inmate, serving a sentence for a crime other than a Class B felony, may petition the sentencing court to adjust the sentence if: (a) the inmate has served at least 85% of the term of confinement for a Class C, D, or E felony; or (b) the inmate has served at least 75% of the term of confinement for a Class F, G, H, or I felony. The inmate may submit only one petition for each imposed sentence. Any one of the following is ground for a petition:

1. The inmate's conduct, efforts at and progress in rehabilitation, or participation and progress in education, treatment, or other correctional programs since he or she was sentenced;
2. A change in law or procedure, effective after the inmate was sentenced, related to sentencing that would have resulted in a shorter term of confinement, if the change had been applicable when the inmate was sentenced;
3. The inmate is subject to a sentence of confinement in another state or the inmate is in the United States illegally and may be deported; or
4. The sentence adjustment is otherwise in the interests of justice.

A court may deny any petition it receives, or hold the petition for further consideration. If the court holds the petition for further consideration, the court must notify the district attorney of the inmate's petition. If the district attorney objects to adjustment of the sentence within 45 days of receiving the court's notification, the court must deny the petition. If the sentence is for certain sex offenses (second-degree sexual assault, third-degree sexual assault, second-degree sexual assault involving a person under 16 years of age, soliciting a child for prostitution, or sexual assault of a child placed in substitute care) and the district attorney does not object to the petition within 10 days of receiving notice, the district attorney is required to notify the victim of the offense of the inmate's petition. If the victim objects to the petition within 45 days of receiving notice, the court must deny the petition.

If the sentencing court does not receive an objection to the sentence adjustment, and the court determines that adjustment is in the public interest, the court may modify the sentence. If the sentence is modified the court must reduce the term of confinement by the amount of time remaining for confinement, less up to 30 days, and increase the term of extended supervision by the corresponding amount. If the court adjusts a sentence based on a change in law or procedure, and the total adjusted sentence length is greater than the maximum total sentence length that the inmate could have received under the change in law or procedure, the court may reduce the length of extended supervision so that the total adjusted sentence length does not exceed the maximum sentence length provided under the new law or procedure. If the adjusted term of extended supervision is greater than the maximum term of extended supervision the inmate could have received under the change in law or procedure, the court may reduce the term of extended supervision so that the term does not exceed the maximum term.

Modification of Extended Supervision. Beginning February 1, 2003, an inmate or the Department of Corrections may petition the sentencing court to modify any conditions of extended supervision set by the court. The court may conduct a hearing to consider the petition and grant the petition in full or in part if it determines that the modification would meet the needs of Corrections and the public and would be consistent with the objective of the person's sentence. The offender or Corrections can appeal any such order, and the appellate court can reverse the order only if it determines that the sentencing court erroneously exercised its discretion in granting or denying the petition.

An inmate may not petition the court to modify the conditions of extended supervision earlier than one year before the inmate's scheduled date of release to extended supervision or more than once before the inmate's release. An inmate may not petition the court to modify the conditions of extended supervision within one year after his or her release to extended supervision. If an offender files a petition for modification after his or her release to extended supervision, the offender may not file another petition until one year after the date of filing the former petition.

Sanctions for Violations of Extended Supervision Conditions. Beginning February 1, 2003, if Corrections alleges that a condition or rule of extended supervision has been violated, Corrections may take physical custody of the person for investigation of the alleged violation. If the person signs a statement admitting a violation of a condition of extended supervision, the Department may, as a sanction for the violation, confine the person for up to 90 days in a regional detention facility or, with the approval of the sheriff, in a county jail. If a county jail was used, the Department is required to reimburse the county for its actual costs of confining the person.

Court Determination of Length of Revocation. Under prior law, revocation of parole or extended supervision and the length of time that an offender is returned to prison was decided by Corrections if the offender waived a hearing, or by an administrative law judge (ALJ) if a hearing is held. Under truth-in-sentencing, while Corrections or the ALJ continued to make the revocation decision for a violation of extended supervision, the sentencing court determined the length of time the offender would be returned to prison. This provision was again modified under 2009 Act 28, discussed below.

2009 Act 28 Sentencing Modifications and 2011 Act 38 Repeal of Sentencing Modifications

The 2009-11 biennial budget act, 2009 Act 28, modified sentencing provisions related to confinement time, extended supervision, and probation. The sentencing modifications included: (a) positive adjustment time; (b) risk reduction sentence; (c) certain early releases; (d) release to extended supervision for older inmates and inmates with extraordinary health conditions; (e) extended supervision discharge; (f) revocation of extended supervision; and (g) probation. However, the majority of the modifications, which became effective on October 1, 2009, were repealed in 2011 Act 38, effective as of August 3, 2011. The repealed provisions are summarized in Appendix V and include: (a) positive adjustment time; (b) risk reduction sentence; (c) certain early releases; (d) extended supervision discharge; and (e) probation discharge. Act 38 allowed grandfathering for an inmate who earned positive adjustment time or was given a risk reduction sentence. A list of offenses ineligible for the repealed sentencing modifications can be found in 2011 Legislative Fiscal Bureau Informational Paper 56 "Felony Sentencing and Probation," Appendix V.

The sentencing modifications that remain under current law include: (a) revocation of extended supervision; (b) release to extended supervision for older inmates and inmates with extraordinary health conditions; and (c) probation. Probation is discussed later in this paper.

Revocation of Extended Supervision. Prior to Act 28, if a person released to extended supervision violated a condition of extended supervision, the review authority (Division of Hearing and Appeals in the Department of Administration or Corrections) could revoke the person's extended supervision. If revoked, the person would be returned to the sentencing court, where the court would order the person to be returned to prison for any specified period of time that does not exceed the time remaining on the bifurcated sentence.

Under Act 28, if a person's extended supervision is revoked as a result of a violation of his or her supervision, the review authority, rather than the sentencing court, may order the person to return to prison for any specified period of time that does not exceed the time remaining on the sentence.

Release to Extended Supervision for Extraordinary Health Conditions. Discussed under the Truth-in-Sentencing II section above, beginning February 1, 2003, older inmates or inmates with terminal conditions serving a bifurcated sentence, other than a Class B felony, could petition the sentencing court to adjust his or her sentence under certain circumstances. As modified by 2009 Act 28 and 2011 Act 38, current law provides inmates with extraordinary health conditions the option to petition the sentencing court to adjust his or her sentence (rather than inmates with terminal conditions). An extraordinary health condition is defined as a condition affecting a person, such as advanced age, infirmity, or disability of the person, or a need for medical treatment or services not available within a correctional institution.

To be eligible due to advanced age, an inmate must be at least 65 years old and have completed at least five years of confinement, or at least 60 years old and have completed at least 10 years of confinement. Under 2011 Act 38, petitions for sentence adjustment based on an extraordinary health condition go to the Department of Correction's Program Review Committee (rather than the Earned Release Review Commission, under 2009 Act 28).

Court-Sentenced Correctional Programs

Challenge Incarceration Program ("Boot Camp")

The Department of Corrections operates a challenge incarceration program at the St. Croix Correctional Center in New Richmond. The program provides inmates with manual labor and military drill and ceremony. Further, the program provides strenuous exercise for participants who have not attained the age of 30 as of the program start date, and age-appropriate strenuous physical exercise for all other participants. Statutory provisions require that the program be designed to include not less than 50 participants at a time and that a participant may complete the program in not more than 180 days.

The program originally was limited to providing substance abuse treatment and counseling. However, under 2009 Act 28, the program was expanded to provide, based on each participant's assessed needs: (a) substance abuse treatment and education, including intensive intervention when indicated; (b) personal development counseling; (c) education; (d) employment readiness training, and (e) other treatment options that are directly related to the participant's criminal behavior. Under 2011 Act 38, the Act 28 modifications were deleted, and the program reverted back to providing substance abuse treatment and counseling.

Under current law, for inmates serving a bifurcated sentence, the sentencing court must decide at sentencing whether or not an inmate is eligible for the program. An eligible inmate may be placed in the challenge incarceration program if all the following criteria are met:

- a. The inmate volunteers for the program;
- b. The inmate has not attained the age of 40 as of the program start date;

- c. The Department determines, during assessment and evaluation, that the inmate has a substance abuse problem;

- d. The Department determines that the inmate has no psychological, physical or medical limitations that would preclude participation in the program; and

- e. The inmate is not incarcerated for a crime against life and bodily security (crimes under Chapter 940 of the statutes), or for certain crimes against a child.

Crimes under Chapter 940 for which inmates are ineligible for the program include: (a) homicides; (b) felony murder; (c) mutilating or hiding a corpse; (d) assisting suicide; (e) abortion; (f) partial-birth abortion; (g) batteries; (h) mayhem; (i) sexual exploitation by therapist; (j) sexual assault; (k) reckless injury; (l) injury by negligent handling of dangerous weapon, explosives or fire; (m) injury by intoxicated use of a vehicle; (n) abuse of vulnerable adults or residents of penal facilities; (o) failure to render aid by a law enforcement officer; (p) abuse and neglect of patients and residents; (q) false imprisonment; (r) human trafficking; (s) taking hostages; (t) kidnapping; (u) stalking; (v) duty to aid victim or report crime; and (w) intimidation or attempted intimidation of witnesses or victims.

Crimes against a child for which inmates are ineligible include: (a) sexual assault of a child; (b) engaging in repeated acts of sexual assault of the same child; (c) physical abuse of a child; (d) sexual exploitation of a child; (e) human trafficking of a child; (f) causing a child to view or listen to sexual activity; (g) incest with a child; (h) child enticement; (i) use of a computer to facilitate a child sex crime; (j) soliciting a child for prostitution; (k) sexual assault of a child placed in substitute care; and (l) sexual assault of a student by a school instructional staff person.

If the Department determines that an inmate servicing a bifurcated sentence has successfully completed the boot camp program, the Department must inform the sentencing court. The sentencing court then will: (a) reduce the prison portion of the bifurcated sentence so that the inmate will be released to extended supervision within 30 days of the date on which the court received notice; and (b) lengthen the term of extended supervision so that the total length of the bifurcated sentence does not change. Inmates in the program serving indeterminate sentences may be paroled upon successful completion and must be placed in an intensive supervision program for drug abuses.

As of July 1, 2018, 1,196 inmates were eligible for the Challenge Incarceration Program and 79 were actively participating in the program.

Wisconsin Substance Abuse Program ("Earned Release Program")

An earned release program was created in 2003 Act 33 for eligible inmates who successfully complete the substance abuse treatment program at the Drug Abuse Correctional Center (DACC). In 2005 Act 25, the Robert E. Ellsworth Correctional Center was designated as a facility for the earned release program for female inmates. In 2007 Act 20, statutory language was modified to allow the Department to operate the program at any of its correctional facilities. Then, under 2009 Act 28, the program was expanded from a substance abuse program to a rehabilitation program. Finally, under 2011 Act 38, the Act 28 expansion to a rehabilitation program was repealed.

Under current law, all inmates are eligible for the earned release program, except inmates who are incarcerated for crimes against life and bodily security, or for certain crimes against a child (the same crimes for which inmates are ineligible for the challenge incarceration program). Inmates in the intensive sanctions program may participate in the program but are not eligible for earned release. For inmates serving a bifurcated sentence, the sentencing court must decide at sentencing whether or not an inmate is eligible for the program. Inmates serving a bifurcated sentence prior to the creation of the program must petition the sentencing court to determine eligibility. The sentencing court must rule on the inmate's petition no later than 90 days after the petition is filed. In addition, eligible inmates serving an indeterminate sentence may be placed in the earned release program by the Department.

If the Department determines that an inmate serving a bifurcated sentence has successfully completed the substance abuse program, the Department must notify the sentencing court. The sentencing court must: (a) reduce the prison portion of the bifurcated sentence so that the inmate will be released to extended supervision within 30 days of the date on which the court received notice; and (b) lengthen the term of extended supervision so that the total length of the bifurcated sentence does not change. Inmates in the program serving indeterminate sentences may be paroled upon successful completion and must be placed in an intensive supervision program appropriate to the parolee's treatment needs.

As of July 1, 2018, 1,477 inmates were eligible for the Wisconsin Substance Abuse Program and 577 were actively participating in the program.

Intensive Sanctions Program

Under statute, the Department of Corrections is authorized to administer the intensive sanctions program for inmates sentenced under indeterminate sentencing (law prior to Truth-in-Sentencing). The program is designed to provide: (a) punishment that is less costly than ordinary imprisonment and more restrictive than ordinary probation, parole supervision or extended supervision; (b) component phases that are intensive and highly structured; and (c) a series of component phases for each participant based on public safety considerations and a participant's need for punishment and treatment.

Since the intensive sanctions program is limited to inmates sentenced prior to Truth-in-Sentencing legislation, the Department administratively discontinued transferring or paroling offenders to the program, and there are no longer any offenders in the program.

Serious Repeat Offenders and Mandatory Minimum Sentences

Wisconsin has a "three strikes" provision for serious repeat offenders and a "two strikes" provision for serious child sex offenders. The "three strikes" provision requires a court to sentence an individual to life imprisonment without parole if the person is convicted on three separate occasions for any serious felony.

The "two strikes" provision, created in 1997 Act 326, requires the court to sentence an individual to life imprisonment without parole if the person is convicted on two separate occasions of: sexual assault of a child, engaging in repeated acts of sexual assault with the same child, sexual exploitation of a child, trafficking of a child, causing a child to view or listen to sexual activity, incest with a child, child enticement, soliciting a child for prostitution, patronizing a child, sexual assault of a child placed in substitute care, sexual assault of a student by a school instructional staff person, abduction of a minor, or kidnapping of a minor.

For both the "two strikes" and "three strikes" provisions, prosecutors must allege and prove that the offender had prior offenses before a court is required to sentence a person to life without the possibility of parole or extended supervision. Appendix VI identifies the felonies that are included under the "three strikes" and "two strikes" laws.

In addition to the "two strikes" and "three strikes" provisions, mandatory minimum sentences have also been established for several felony offenses, including: (a) certain child sex offenses; (b) repeat serious sex crimes; (c) repeat serious violent crimes; and (d) certain firearms offenses. Mandatory minimum sentences require individuals to serve some portion of their sentence with a term of confinement in prison. Appendix VII identifies each felony offense for which a mandatory minimum sentence is mandated and the required term of confinement in prison.

Probation

If a person is convicted of a crime, a court may grant probation, either by withholding a sentence or by imposing a sentence and staying its execution. The person is then placed on probation under the supervision of the Department of Corrections. The court may impose any conditions on the probationer that appear to be reasonable and appropriate. Corrections may also impose rules and regulations on the offender. The period of probation may be made consecutive to a sentence on a different charge, whether imposed at the same time or previously. No offender convicted of any of the following offenses may be placed on probation: (a) an offense punishable by life imprisonment; (b) repeat serious sexual offenses; (c) repeat serious violent crimes (felony murder and second-degree intentional homicide); and (d) operating a vehicle under the influence of an intoxicant or other drug for a first, second and third offense.

When placing a person on probation, a court is required to order a probationer to pay restitution, unless the court finds there is substantial reason not to order restitution as a condition of probation. If a court does not require restitution to be paid to a victim, the court is required to state its reason on the record. If a court does require restitution, it is required to notify the Department of Justice of its decision if the victim is eligible for compensation under the state crime victim compensation program.

The court cannot place a person on probation who is convicted of a crime punishable by life imprisonment. If a person is convicted of an offense that provides a mandatory or presumptive minimum period of one year or less of imprisonment, the court may place the person on probation if the court requires, as a condition of probation, that the person be confined in a county jail, Huber facility (work release), work camp, or tribal jail for at least that mandatory or presumptive minimum period. The person is eligible to earn good time credit of up to 25% of confinement.

If a court places the person on probation, the court may require the probationer to reimburse the county or the state for any costs of legal representation for the defense of the case. In order to receive reimbursement, the county or state public defender must provide a statement of its costs of legal representation to the defendant and court within the time period set by the court.

Under the statutes, the lengths of terms of probation are as follows:

1. For a misdemeanor involving firearm possession, domestic abuse, fourth-degree sexual assault, crimes against children, or some offenses involving intoxicated use of specified vehicles, not less than six months nor more than two years probation.
2. For one Class A misdemeanor, not less than six months nor more than one year.
3. For other misdemeanors not covered under 1. or 2. above, not more than one year.
4. For not less than two nor more than four misdemeanors at the same time, the maximum original term of probation may be increased by one year.
5. For five or more misdemeanors at the same time, the maximum original term of probation may be increased by two years.
6. For a misdemeanor involving a violation of a temporary restraining order or injunction, not less than six months nor more than the period of the injunction issued.

7. For any felony, not less than one year nor more than the statutory maximum term of confinement in prison for the crime or three years, whichever is greater.

8. If the offender is convicted of two or more crimes, including at least one felony, at the same time, the maximum original term of probation may be increased by one year for each felony conviction.

The court may require, as a condition of probation, that the probationer be confined during the term of probation, but not to exceed one year. The court may grant the privilege of leaving the county jail, Huber facility, work camp, or tribal jail during the hours or periods of employment or other approved activity while confined. The court may specify the necessary and reasonable hours and delegate that authority to the sheriff.

In addition, with the consent of the Department of Corrections and when recommended in a presentence investigation, a court may order a felony offender confined to a facility in the City of Milwaukee to allow the offender to complete an alcohol and other drug abuse treatment program.

A court may require, as a condition of probation, that the probationer perform community service work for a public agency or a nonprofit charitable organization. The number of hours of community service may not exceed what would be reasonable considering the seriousness of the offense. Community service work may only be ordered if agreed to by the probationer and the organization or agency. A court is required to ensure that a probationer is provided a written statement of the terms of the community service order and that the community service order is monitored. If the court requires community service and confinement time, a probationer reduces the period of confinement by one day for each three, eight-hour days of work performed.

At least 90 days before the expiration of an individual's probation, the Department must notify the sentencing court and district attorney if a probationer owes any crime victim and witness assistance surcharge amounts. Upon receiving notice, the court must schedule a probation review hearing to be held before the expiration date of probation, unless the probationer either pays the unpaid surcharge before the hearing or voluntarily waives the hearing. A waiver of a probation review hearing must include an acknowledgement by the probationer that waiver may result in an extension of the probation period, a modification of the terms and conditions of probation, or revocation of probation.

At a probation review hearing, the Department has the burden of proving that the probationer owes an unpaid crime victim and witness assistance surcharge. If the Department proves by a preponderance of evidence that the surcharge is owed, the court may order the extension of probation or modify the terms and conditions of probation. If the court does not extend probation, the court must issue a judgment for the unpaid surcharge and direct the Clerk of Circuit Court to file and enter the judgment. If the court issues a judgment for the unpaid surcharge, the court must send a written notification to the Department that a civil judgment has been issued.

Prior to the expiration of any probation period, a court, for cause and by order, may extend probation for a specified period or modify the terms and conditions. Any of the following situations constitute a cause for the extension of probation: (a) the probationer has not made a good faith effort to discharge court-ordered payment obligations or to pay the required probation and parole supervision fees owed to the Department of Corrections; (b) the probationer is not presently able to make required restitution payments and the probationer and the person to whom restitution is owed consent to the performance of community service work in satisfaction of restitution ordered for that person, for which an extended period of probation is required; or (c) the court finds that extension would serve the purposes for which probation was imposed and the probationer agrees to the extension. If a probationer does not agree to an extension or modification of probation, revocation proceedings may begin that could result in the original stayed sentence being imposed or result in the imposition of a sentence if one had originally been withheld. If probation is not extended and restitution or fees are still owed, a civil judgment may be entered against a probationer.

The Department of Corrections may initiate the probation revocation process if a probationer violates a condition of probation. Under this process, the Department of Administration's Division of Hearings and Appeals or Corrections, if a probationer waives a hearing, conducts an administrative hearing and enters an order to either revoke or not revoke an offender's probation. If an offender is revoked, the person is either: (a) ordered to be brought before the court for sentencing, if sentence had been withheld; or (b) ordered to prison or jail if the probationer had already been sentenced and the original sentence was stayed.

The court may modify a person's period of probation and discharge the person if all the following apply: (a) the Department of Corrections petitions the court to discharge the person; (b) the probationer has completed 50% of his or her period of probation; (c) the probationer has satisfied all conditions of probation that were set by the court; (d) the probationer has satisfied all rules and conditions of probation that were set by the Department; (e) the probationer has fulfilled all financial obligations to his or her victims, the court, and the Department, including the payment of any fine, forfeiture, fee or surcharge, or order of restitution; and (f) the probationer is not required to register under the sex offender registry.

If the court receives a petition from the Department of Corrections to modify a person's probation, the clerk of court must send a notice of hearing to the victim of the crime, if the victim has requested such notification.

A probationer is discharged from probation when the court-ordered period of probation has expired and the probationer has satisfied the conditions of his or her probation. Upon completion of probation, Corrections is required to do all of the following:

1. If the probationer was placed on probation for a felony, issue the probationer one of the following: (a) a certificate of discharge from probation for the felony for which he or she was placed on probation if, at the time of discharge, the probationer is on probation or parole for another felony; or (b) a certificate of final discharge if, at the time of discharge, the probationer is not on probation or parole for another felony. A certificate of final discharge lists the civil rights that have and have not been restored to the probationer.

2. If the probationer was placed on probation for a misdemeanor, notify the probationer that his or her period of probation has expired.

3. Notify the court that placed the probationer on probation that the period of probation has expired.

Lifetime Supervision for Serious Sex Offenders

A court may, in addition to sentencing a person, placing a person on probation, or committing a person to a mental health facility, place a person on lifetime supervision by Corrections if a person is convicted of a serious sex offense or found not guilty of a serious sex offense by reason of mental disease or defect. A court must determine that lifetime supervision is necessary to protect the public and must notify the person that he or she is being placed on lifetime supervision. A person placed on lifetime supervision is subject to the control of Corrections under conditions set by the court and regulations of the Department that are necessary to protect the public and promote the rehabilitation of the person placed on lifetime supervision.

"Serious sex offenses" for which a person may be placed on lifetime supervision include: (a) the commission of, or the solicitation, conspiracy or attempt to commit, sexual exploitation by a therapist, first-, second- and third-degree sexual assault, first- and second-degree sexual assault of a child, engaging in repeated acts of sexual assault with the same child, sexual exploitation of a child, trafficking of a child, causing a child to view or listen to sexual activity, incest with a child, child enticement, soliciting a child for prostitution, exposing a child to harmful materials or harmful descriptions or narratives, possession of child pornography, using a computer to facilitate a child sex crime, sexual assault of a child placed in substitute care, and child sex offender working with children; or (b) a violation of, or the solicitation, conspiracy or attempt to commit a violation, under the statutes related to life and bodily security, crimes against reputation, privacy and civil liberties, property crimes, crimes against sexual morality or crimes against children, if a court determines that one of the purposes for the conduct constituting the violation was for a person's sexual arousal or gratification. If a prosecutor seeks lifetime supervision for a person who is charged with committing a serious sex offense under (b), a court is required to find a special verdict as to whether the conduct constituting the offense was for the defendant's sexual arousal or gratification.

Lifetime supervision begins: (a) if the person is placed on probation for the serious sex offense, upon his or her discharge from probation; (b) if the person is sentenced to prison for the serious sex offense, upon his or her discharge from parole or extended supervision; (c) if the person is sentenced to prison for the serious sex offense and is being released from prison because he or she has reached the expiration date of his or her sentence, upon his or her release from prison; (d) if the person has been committed to a mental health facility for the serious sex offense, upon the termination of his or her commitment or his or her discharge from the commitment; or (e) if none of the previous situations apply, upon the person being sentenced for a serious sex offense.

A person placed on lifetime supervision is under the control of Corrections. The Department may temporarily take a person on lifetime supervision into custody if it has reasonable grounds to believe that the person has violated a condition or regulation of lifetime supervision. Custody may, however, last only as long as is reasonably necessary to investigate whether the person violated a condition or regulation of lifetime supervision and, if warranted, refer the person to the appropriate prosecuting agency for commencement of prosecution. No person placed on lifetime supervision may knowingly violate a condition or regulation of lifetime supervision established by the court or by Corrections. If any violation occurs, it could be considered a Class A misdemeanor unless the violation is a felony, in which case the person could be charged with a Class E felony prior to February 1, 2003, and a Class I felony on or after February 1, 2003.

A person placed on lifetime supervision may file a petition with the court requesting that lifetime supervision be terminated if: (a) he or she has not been convicted of a crime that was committed during the period of lifetime supervision; and (b) he or she has been on lifetime supervision for at least 15 years. The petition must be filed with the court that ordered the lifetime supervision. If a person files a petition requesting termination at any time earlier than 15 years after the date on which the period of lifetime supervision began, the court is required to deny the petition without a hearing.

A request for supervision termination follows the process outlined below.

1. Upon receiving a petition requesting termination of lifetime supervision, the court is required to send a copy of the petition to the district attorney responsible for prosecuting the serious sex offense that was the basis for the order of lifetime supervision. Upon receiving a copy of a petition sent to him or her, the district attorney must conduct a criminal history record search to determine whether the person has been convicted of a criminal offense that was committed during the period of lifetime supervision. No later than 30 days after the date on which he or she receives the copy of the petition, the district attorney must report the results of the criminal history record search to the court and may also provide a written response to the petition.

2. After reviewing the report of the district attorney, the court is required to do whichever of the following is applicable:

a. If the report of the district attorney indicates that the person has been convicted of a criminal offense that was committed during the period of lifetime supervision, the court must deny the person's petition without a hearing.

b. If the report of the district attorney indicates that the person has not been convicted of a criminal offense that was committed during the period of lifetime supervision, the court is required to order the person to be examined by a physician or psychologist, notify Corrections that it may submit a report, and schedule a hearing on the petition.

3. A person entitled to a hearing must be examined by a person who is either a physician or a psychologist and who is approved by the court. The physician or psychologist who conducts an examination is required to prepare a report of his or her examination that includes his or her opinion of whether the person petitioning for termination of lifetime supervision is a danger to public. The physician or psychologist must file the report of his or her examination with the court within 60 days after completing the examination, and the court is required to provide copies of the report to the person filing the petition and the district attorney.

The contents of the report are confidential until the physician or psychologist testifies at a hearing. The person petitioning for termination of lifetime supervision must pay the cost of an examination.

4. After it receives notification from the court, Corrections may prepare and submit to the court a report concerning the person. If Corrections prepares and submits the report, the report must include information concerning the person's conduct while on lifetime supervision and an opinion as to whether lifetime supervision of the person is still necessary to protect the public. The contents of the report must be revealed to the attorney for the person who filed the petition and to the district attorney.

5. A hearing on a petition may not be conducted until the person filing the petition has been examined and a report of the examination has been filed. At the hearing, the court must take evidence it considers relevant to determining whether lifetime supervision should be continued because the person who filed the petition is a danger to the public. The person who filed the petition and the district attorney who received the petition may offer evidence relevant to the issue of the person's dangerousness and the continued need for lifetime supervision.

6. The court may grant a petition requesting termination of lifetime supervision if it determines after a hearing that lifetime supervision is no longer necessary to protect the public.

7. If a petition requesting termination of lifetime supervision is denied after a hearing, the person may not file a subsequent petition requesting termination of lifetime supervision until at least three years have elapsed since the most recent petition was denied.

8. If the court grants a petition requesting termination of lifetime supervision and the person is registered with Corrections as a sex offender, the court may also order that the person is no longer required to comply with the sex offender registry reporting requirements. This provision does not, however, apply to any person who is required by the court to comply with the registration requirements for life.

Original Jurisdiction of Adult Court for Juvenile Offenders

Adult criminal courts have exclusive original jurisdiction over juveniles under the following conditions:

1. If a juvenile is alleged to have attempted or committed first-degree intentional homicide or to have committed first-degree reckless homicide or second-degree intentional homicide on or after the juvenile's 10th birthday;

2. If a juvenile has been adjudicated delinquent and is alleged to have committed battery or assault while placed in a juvenile correctional facility, a juvenile detention facility, or a secured residential care center for children and youth or against an aftercare agent or a probation, extended supervision and parole agent;

3. If a juvenile specified in 1. or 2., who is alleged to have attempted or committed a violation of any state criminal law in addition to the violation alleged under 1. or 2., is under the adult court's jurisdiction for all of the alleged violations if the violations can be charged in the same complaint ("joined"); or

4. If a juvenile is alleged to have violated any state criminal law and has either been convicted of a previous violation in adult court (following waiver to adult court or under the original jurisdiction of the adult court) or has criminal proceedings pending in adult court (commonly referred to as "once waived/always waived").

A juvenile under adult court jurisdiction is subject to criminal court procedures and criminal penalties for the crime that the juvenile is alleged to have committed except as follows:

1. If the adult court transfers its original jurisdiction to the juvenile court. The adult court may transfer its original jurisdiction to the juvenile court if, after finding probable cause that the juvenile has committed one of the offenses listed above, the juvenile proves by a preponderance of the evidence all of the following: (a) that, if convicted, the juvenile could not receive adequate treatment in the adult criminal justice system; (b) that transferring jurisdiction to the juvenile court would not depreciate the seriousness of the offense; and (c) that retaining jurisdiction is not necessary to deter the juvenile or other juveniles from committing such violations;

2. The adult court must impose a juvenile disposition, in lieu of a criminal penalty, if any of the following conditions apply:

a. The adult court finds that the juvenile committed a lesser offense than the offense charged or a joined offense and the offense is not: (a) first-degree intentional homicide or attempted first-degree intentional homicide; (b) first-degree reckless homicide or second-degree intentional homicide; (c) battery or assault while placed in a juvenile correctional facility, a juvenile detention facility, or a secured residential care center for children and youth or against an aftercare agent or a probation, extended supervision and parole agent; or (d) an offense for which a juvenile could be waived into adult court (described in the next section);

b. If the juvenile was younger than 15 years of age at the time the offense was committed, the adult court finds that the juvenile committed a lesser offense that is an offense specified above and the court determines, based on certain criteria, that the juvenile has proved by clear and convincing evidence that it would be in the best interests of the juvenile and of the public to impose a juvenile disposition under the juvenile justice code. The criteria used by the adult court in making the determination are identical to those used by the juvenile court in determining whether a juvenile should be waived to adult court (described in the next section); or

c. The adult court finds that the juvenile has not, on or after the juvenile's 15th birthday: (a) committed or attempted first-degree intentional homicide; or (b) committed first-degree reckless homicide or second-degree intentional homicide, and the court finds that, based on the waiver criteria, the juvenile has proved by clear and convincing evidence that it would be in the best interests of the juvenile and the public to impose a juvenile disposition under the juvenile justice code.

More information on the jurisdiction over juvenile offenders can be found in 2019 Legislative Fiscal Bureau Informational Paper 55 "Juvenile Justice and Youth Aids Program."

Waiver to Adult Court for Juveniles 14 or Older

A district attorney or a juvenile may petition to the juvenile court requesting to waive its jurisdiction to the adult court in any of the following situations:

1. If the juvenile is alleged to have committed felony murder, second-degree reckless homicide, first- or second-degree sexual assault, taking hostages, kidnapping, armed robbery, robbery of a financial institution, armed burglary or the manufacture, distribution or delivery of a controlled substance on or after the juvenile's 14th birthday;

2. If the juvenile is alleged to have committed, on or after the juvenile's 14th birthday, a violation, at the request of or for the benefit of a criminal gang, that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult; or

3. If the juvenile is alleged to have violated any state criminal law on or after the juvenile's 15th birthday.

The judge may also file a petition for waiver in any of these situations, if the judge disqualifies himself or herself from any future proceedings on the case. The petition must contain a brief statement of the facts supporting the waiver request.

The juvenile must be represented by counsel at the waiver hearing. The juvenile has the right to present testimony on his or her own behalf, including expert testimony, and has the right to cross-examine witnesses. The juvenile does not have the right to a jury at a waiver hearing.

Before determining whether or not to waive jurisdiction, the court must determine whether the matter has prosecutive merit. If the court determines the matter does not have prosecutive merit, the court must deny the petition for waiver.

If a petition for waiver of jurisdiction is contested, the district attorney must present relevant testimony to the court. If uncontested, no testimony need be taken if the court determines that the decision not to contest the waiver of jurisdiction is knowingly, intelligently and voluntarily made. Regardless of whether or not the petition is contested, the court must base its decision whether to waive jurisdiction on the following criteria:

1. The personality of the juvenile, including whether the juvenile has a mental illness or developmental disability, the juvenile's physical and mental maturity, and the juvenile's pattern of living, prior treatment history, and apparent potential for responding to future treatment;

2. The prior record of the juvenile;

3. The type and seriousness of the offense, including whether it was against persons or property and the extent to which it was committed in a violent, aggressive, premeditated or willful manner;

4. The adequacy and suitability of facilities, services and procedures available for treatment of the juvenile in the juvenile justice system and the protection of the public; and

5. The desirability of trial and disposition of the entire offense in one court if the juvenile was allegedly associated in the offense with persons who will be charged with a crime in adult court.

The court may designate the Department of Corrections, a county department, or licensed child welfare agency to submit a report analyzing the above waiver criteria. The court may rely on facts stated in the report to make its findings.

After considering these criteria, the court must state its finding with respect to the criteria on the record. If the court determines that it is established by clear and convincing evidence that it would be contrary to the best interests of the juvenile or of the public to hear the case, the court enters an order waiving jurisdiction and referring the matter to the district attorney for appropriate proceedings in adult court. After the order, the court of criminal jurisdiction has exclusive jurisdiction.

If the juvenile absconds and does not appear at the waiver hearing, the court may proceed with the hearing in the juvenile's absence. If the waiver is granted, the juvenile may contest the waiver when he or she is apprehended by showing the court good cause for failure to appear. If the court of criminal jurisdiction finds good cause for the juvenile's failure to appear, the court must transfer jurisdiction back to the juvenile court to hold a waiver hearing.

If the waiver is granted, the district attorney may charge the offense he or she deems is appropriate and a court or jury may convict the juvenile with regard to any offense. If the waived juvenile is being held in secure custody, he or she is transferred to an appropriate officer or adult facility and is eligible for bail.

Correctional Placement of Juveniles Convicted in Adult Court

If a juvenile who has not attained the age of 18 years is sentenced to a state prison, the Department must place the juvenile at a secured juvenile correctional facility or a secured residential care center for children and youth, unless the Department determines that prison placement is appropriate based on: (a) the juvenile's prior record of adjustment in a correctional setting, if any; (b) the juvenile's present and potential vocational and educational needs, interests and abilities; (c) the adequacy and suitability of available facilities; (d) the services and procedures available for treatment of the juvenile within the various institutions; (e) the protection of the public; and (f) any other considerations promulgated by the Department by rule.

APPENDIX I

Felony Sentencing Prior to December 31, 1999 ("Indeterminate Sentencing")

For felony offenses occurring before December 31, 1999, offenders are sentenced under an indeterminate sentencing structure. Under an indeterminate sentence, judges could impose a sentence for each charge resulting in a conviction. The sentence is for a fixed amount of time equal to or less than the statutory maximum. The sentence length imposed by a judge includes both time in prison and on parole. The maximum indeterminate sentences for Wisconsin's previous six classes of felonies are identified in the table below.

Under an indeterminate sentence, persons sentenced to prison, other than those sentenced to life, must serve a minimum of the greater of six months or 25% of the court-imposed sentence before becoming eligible for parole (commonly referred to as the "parole eligibility date"). Convictions for some offenses (particularly drug crimes) may require a longer minimum prison term before a person reaches the parole eligibility date. Inmates serving life sentences generally become eligible for parole after serving 13 years and four months. For crimes punishable by life imprisonment, a judge could, however, set any parole eligibility date that is later than the statutorily-defined date or impose a sentence of life without the possibility of parole. Further, judges could establish a parole eligibility date for individuals convicted of serious felony offenses (see Appendix VI under "parole eligibility") who have previously been convicted of a serious felony offense. The date established by the court could not be less than the parole eligibility date or more than two-thirds of a sentence. If the court did not establish a parole eligibility date, an individual is eligible for parole after serving 25% of his or her sentence.

The use of "good time credit" also affects the length of time a felon is imprisoned under an indeterminate sentence. Under this concept, inmates receive credit against the time they are sentenced to serve based on the inmate's performance in the areas of prison duties, labor, and educational studies. Except as discussed below, for crimes committed after May 31, 1984, and prior to December 31, 1999, offenders sentenced to prison are subject to mandatory release upon serving two-thirds of the court-imposed sentence. This release date may be extended for infractions of prison regulations.

The decision to grant discretionary parole (release from prison at any time between the parole eligibility date and the mandatory release date) is made by the Department of Corrections' Parole Commission. The Commission consists of four members: the chairperson, appointed for a two-year term by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate; and three other members in the classified service appointed by the chairperson. The Commission conducts interviews with parole-eligible inmates and decides whether to grant a discretionary release. Authority for final discretionary parole decisions rests with the Parole Commission chair. If discretionary parole is granted, the parolee is placed under the supervision of the Department of Corrections for a period not to exceed the court-imposed sentence, less time already served.

If discretionary parole is denied, the individual will be released and placed under parole supervision upon reaching the statutory mandatory release date for a period not to exceed the court-imposed sentence, less time already served. A person sentenced to life imprisonment is not subject to mandatory release provisions. Corrections may discharge a parolee from supervision on or after his or her mandatory release date or after two years of supervision. Individuals serving their entire sentence in prison or completing their sentence in prison are released directly from prison without parole supervision. A person sentenced to life imprisonment is not subject to mandatory release provisions.

For individuals convicted of certain serious felony offenses (see Appendix VI under "Mandatory Release"), the Parole Commission may decide not to release an inmate on the mandatory release date, but instead establish a later release date (commonly referred to as "presumptive mandatory release"). If the Commission does not deny an individual subject to the presumptive mandatory release provisions release at two-thirds of the court-imposed sentence, the individual is released on parole supervision. If release is denied, regular reviews of the inmate's case are required.

Maximum Total Sentence for Classified Felonies Under Indeterminate Sentencing

Class A	Life imprisonment.
Class B	Imprisonment not to exceed 40 years for offenses occurring after April 20, 1994, and imprisonment not to exceed 20 years for offenses that occurred prior to that date.
Class BC	Fine not to exceed $10,000 or imprisonment not to exceed 20 years for offenses occurring after December 1, 1995.
Class C	Fine not to exceed $10,000 or imprisonment not to exceed 10 years, or both.
Class D	Fine not to exceed $10,000 or imprisonment not to exceed 5 years, or both.
Class E	Fine not to exceed $10,000 or imprisonment not to exceed 2 years, or both.

APPENDIX V

2009 Act 28 Sentencing Modifications (Repealed in 2011 Act 38)

This appendix describes the sentencing modifications that were enacted in 2009 Act 28, but later repealed under 2011 Act 38. In addition to the provisions below, Act 38 repealed the language related to the naming of the Earned Release Review Commission. As a result, the Earned Release Review Commissions' name was returned to the Parole Commission. The expanded authority given to the Commission under Act 28 was also returned to its previous scope under Act 38.

Positive Adjustment Time. Act 28 created "positive adjustment time" to allow certain inmates to earn earlier release from prison by not violating any prison regulations and not refusing or neglecting to perform required or assigned duties.

Individuals eligible for positive adjustment time were generally divided into three categories: (a) offenders convicted of non-violent Class F to I felonies who are not determined by the Department of Corrections to be at high-risk of reoffending after applying an objective risk assessment instrument supported by research; (b) offenders convicted of violent Class F to I felonies, or determined to be high-risk of reoffending; and (c) offenders convicted of Class C to E felonies. Individuals who were sentenced for certain offenses were excluded from positive adjustment time, including all sex offenses requiring registration with the sex offender registry.

An inmate's sentence would be adjusted depending on the category of offender. Offenders convicted of non-violent Class F to I felonies not considered high-risk could earn one day of positive adjustment time for every two days served without violation of a prison regulation, or refusal or neglect to perform required or assigned duties. Offenders convicted of violent Class F to I felonies, or non-violent Class F to I felonies considered high-risk, could earn one day of positive adjustment time for every three days served. Finally, offenders convicted of Class C to E felonies could earn one day of positive adjustment time for every 5.7 days served.

When the first category of offender (non-violent Class F to I felonies not considered high-risk) was within 90 days of release to extended supervision, the Department was required to notify the sentencing court that it intended to modify the inmate's sentence and release the inmate to extended supervision. If the court decided to hold a review hearing, the court was required to schedule the hearing within 30 days after notification. A hearing would be held and an order issued relating to the inmate's sentence modification within 60 days of notification. At the hearing, the court could consider the inmate's conduct in prison, his or her level of risk of reoffending based on a verified, objective instrument, and the nature of the offense committed by the inmate. The court could accept the Department's determination that the inmate had earned positive adjustment time, or order the inmate to remain in prison for a period of time that did not exceed the time remaining on the inmate's term of confinement. If the court did not schedule a hearing, or if the court accepted the Department's determination at the hearing, the Department was required to release the inmate to extended supervision.

For the other categories of offenders (violent Class F to I felonies, non-violent Class F to I felonies considered high-risk, or Class C to E felonies), offenders could petition the Earned Release Review Commission (ERRC) (Parole Commission) for release to extended supervision when he or she had served the term of confinement in prison portion of his or her bifurcated sentence, less positive adjustment time earned. The ERRC could consider any of the following as grounds for a petition for release to extended supervision: (a) the inmate's treatment, or other correctional programs since he or she was sentenced; (b) the inmate was subject to a sentence of confinement in another state or the inmate was in the United States illegally and could be deported; or (c) sentence adjustment was otherwise in the interests of justice.

When the offender was within 90 days of release to extended supervision, the ERRC was required to notify the sentencing court that it intended to modify the inmate's sentence and release the inmate to extended supervision. If the court decided to hold a review hearing, the court was required to schedule the hearing within 30 days after notification. A hearing would be held and an order signed relating to the inmate's sentence modification within 60 days of notification. At the hearing, the court could consider the inmate's conduct in prison, his or her level of risk of reoffending based on a verified, objective instrument, and the nature of the offense committed by the inmate. The court could accept the ERRC's determination that the inmate had earned positive adjustment time, or order the inmate to remain in prison for a period of time that did not exceed the time remaining on the inmate's term of confinement. If the court did not schedule a hearing, or if the court accepted the ERRC's determination at the hearing, the ERRC was required to release the inmate to extended supervision.

Inmates who were released to extended supervision based on positive adjustment time would have their term of extended supervision increased so that the total length of the bifurcated sentence would not change.

The repealing legislation, 2011 Act 38, allowed grandfathering for an inmate who earned positive adjustment time between October 1, 2009, and August 3, 2011. A list of offenses ineligible for the repealed sentencing modifications can be found in 2011 Legislative Fiscal Bureau Informational Paper 56 "Felony Sentencing and Probation," Appendix V.

Risk Reduction Program

Under 2009 Act 28, whenever a court imposes a bifurcated sentence, the court may order the person to serve a risk reduction sentence if: (a) the court determines that a risk reduction sentence is appropriate; and (b) the person agrees to cooperate in an assessment of his or her criminogenic factors and risk of reoffending, and to participate in programming or treatment the Department develops for the person. The risk reduction sentence is not a separate sentence imposed by the court, but rather a court-determined means to identify offenders at sentencing who, if successfully completing programming or treatment, may have their bifurcated sentence reduced. Only individuals who were sentenced on or after October 1, 2009, are eligible for risk reduction sentences.

Under the risk reduction program, the Department must: (a) provide programming and treatment for inmates sentenced to risk reduction; (b) conduct a validated and objective assessment of the inmate's criminogenic factors and risk of reoffending; and (c) develop a program plan for the inmate that is designed to reduce the risk and address the factors identified. The Department may modify the plan. If the Department determines that the inmate has completed the programming or treatment under the plan and that the inmate maintained a good conduct record during confinement, the Department must release the inmate to extended supervision when he or she has served not less than 75% of the term of confinement. Not less than 30 days prior to release, the Department must notify the sentencing court that the inmate has thus far successfully completed the requirements of his or her risk reduction sentence. If the inmate is released early after successfully completing the risk reduction program, his or her overall sentence is reduced.

The repealing legislation, 2011 Act 38, allowed grandfathering for an inmate who was given a risk reduction sentence between October 1, 2009, and August 3, 2011. A list of offenses ineligible for the repealed sentencing modifications can be found in 2011 Legislative Fiscal Bureau Informational Paper 56 "Felony Sentencing and Probation," Appendix V.

Certain Early Releases. As discussed under the Truth-in-Sentencing II section of this paper, beginning February 1, 2003, inmates serving a bifurcated sentence, other than a Class B felony, may petition the sentencing court to adjust his or her sentence if the inmate has served at least 75% of a Class F to I felony, or 85% of a Class C to E felony. Under Act 28, this sentence modification option only applied to inmates serving bifurcated sentences imposed prior to October 1, 2009. Inmates serving bifurcated sentences who were convicted on or after October 1, 2009 were ineligible for this option. Act 28 created a new option for modifying bifurcated sentences.

Under the certain early releases option, the Department could release inmates to extended supervision if all the following conditions were met: (a) the person was serving time for a non-violent Class F to I felony; (b) the prison social worker or extended supervision agent of record had reason to believe that the person could maintain himself or herself while not confined without engaging in assaultive activity; and (c) the release to extended supervision date was not more than 12 months before the person's extended supervision eligibility date. If an inmate was released early, his or her term of extended supervision was increased so the overall length of the bifurcated sentence did not change.

Inmates who were serving bifurcated sentences imposed prior to October 1, 2009, and who met the criteria for the certain early releases option, could choose to modify their sentence under the prior modification provision (75% or 85%), or the certain early releases provision.

A list of offenses ineligible for sentencing modifications can be found in 2011 Legislative Fiscal Bureau Informational Paper 56 "Felony Sentencing and Probation," Appendix V.

Discharge from Extended Supervision. Act 28 provided that the Department may discharge a person from extended supervision after he or she had served two years of extended supervision, if the person met the conditions of extended supervision and the reduction was in the interests of justice. The Department was required to notify any victim(s) of the person of its intent to discharge the person from extended supervision. The Department could promulgate rules establishing guidelines and criteria for the exercise of discretion for discharge. The repealing legislation, 2011 Act 38, requires each offender to serve his or her entire bifurcated sentence.

Discharge from Probation. Act 28 also authorized the Department to modify an offender's probation term and discharge the offender from probation if the offender completed 50% of his or her probation period. The repealing legislation, 2011 Act 38, amended the law to provide that, upon petition from the Department, the sentencing court may modify a person's probation period if certain statutory criteria are satisfied (including serving 50% of their probation period, satisfying all conditions set by the sentencing court and the Department, and fulfilling all financial obligations).
