Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This substitute amendment differs from 2019 Assembly Bill 487 in the following respects:

1. The substitute amendment narrows the definition of the “practice of psychology” such that certain activities would not, under the substitute amendment, require a psychologist license. The substitute amendment also broadens an exception to the prohibition against practicing psychology without a license concerning persons engaged in educational or vocational counseling or testing.

2. The substitute amendment further specifies the supervised experience that is required in order for an individual to be granted a psychologist license.

3. The substitute amendment deletes references to certain organizations specified in the bill and instead requires the board to determine or approve the relevant organization.

4. The substitute amendment eliminates a change that would limit a provision that allows a psychologist licensed in another jurisdiction to temporarily practice in this state to only individuals licensed in the United States or Canada. Under the substitute amendment, the provision also applies to individuals licensed in foreign countries, but the other state’s, country’s, or territory’s standards must, in the opinion of the board, be equivalent to or higher than the requirements for licensure as a psychologist in this state.

5. In addition to allowing an interim psychologist license to be granted to an individual who has not yet completed his or her required postdoctoral supervised experience, the substitute amendment allows it to be granted to an individual who has not yet completed a required written examination on the professional practice of psychology.

6. The substitute amendment affects a provision that allows the board to waive certain psychologist licensure requirements for individuals licensed in other jurisdictions. Specifically, the substitute amendment eliminates changes to this provision so that it will continue to apply to individuals licensed in foreign countries, and not just individuals licensed in the United States or Canada.

7. The substitute amendment eliminates language in the bill that requires licensees to retain proof of completion of required continuing education. The substitute amendment also eliminates a provision allowing the board to audit any licensee under investigation for compliance with continuing education requirements.

8. The substitute amendment deletes various changes from the bill relating to professional discipline, including changes that added certain additional grounds for professional discipline against a licensee. The substitute amendment also eliminates a provision that, in certain circumstances, allows the board to require a licensee or applicant to submit to a psychological examination.
