Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Current law allows any member of the public to observe the conduct of an election at a polling place or at a site for voting by absentee ballot in person. An individual may also observe the canvassing of absentee ballots. Under current law, an election observer must print his or her name and sign and date a log maintained by the municipal clerk or chief inspector. In addition, the clerk or chief inspector must designate an observation area that is not less than three feet from nor more than eight feet from the table where voters announce their name and address and not less than three feet from nor more than eight feet from the table where individuals are registered to vote. The clerk or chief inspector must establish the observation area at a location where an observer may readily observe all aspects of the voting process. Finally, the clerk or chief inspector may remove an election observer who disrupts the voting process, engages in electioneering, or posts election-related material.

Current law also requires a board of canvassers to publicly conduct all steps of a recount. During the conduct, the person who petitioned for the recount, the opposing candidates, and other interested persons are entitled to be present in person and by counsel to observe the proceedings.

This bill requires the municipal clerk, chief inspector, and board of canvassers to provide election observers uniform and nondiscriminatory access to all stages of the election process, including recounts. Under the bill, an election observer must wear a badge with the first initial and last name of the observer and the name of the organization, if any, the observer is representing. The observer may not wear any campaign material advocating voting for or against a candidate or for or against any position on a ballot question. An observer who violates this prohibition may be expelled from the location where the observer is observing election procedures. However, an individual observing a recount may wear a name tag or badge that includes a candidate's campaign logo or the name of the organization that the observer represents. In addition, an election observer may not interfere with a voter nor hinder an election official in the performance of his or her duties.

The bill also expands the observation area required under current law so that it is not more than three feet from the table where voters announce their name and address and not more than three feet from the table where individuals are registered to vote. Similarly, with respect to recounts, the bill requires the board of canvassers to establish observation areas that are no more than three feet from a table where ballots and other election-related materials are being examined and processed.

Finally, under the bill, any person who intentionally obstructs an election observer's access to observe election procedures may be fined up to $1,000 or imprisoned for up to six months or both.

Because this bill creates a new crime or revises a penalty for an existing crime, the Joint Review Committee on Criminal Penalties may be requested to prepare a report.
